HUMOR

BY RICHARD MELTZER

True "0" in Ohio

back in my college days I had two art teachers, one a stoic hipster founding father of so-called environmental art, the other a drunken Mayflower descendant with ten kids who did plaster busts of the presidents and would often wax weepy, wife out of earshot, re a long-gone great love who had ruined his life once in Zanesville, Ohio

dark, rainy, 200
miles to Columbus
so I pull over
flick on the light notice my nails are filthy consult a map and whoa ho — clearly within range!
Zanesville

where at 8:30
on a Thursday
five, make that six, ancient churches
better preserved than the great cathedrals of Europe
glisten in the
streetlit drizzle
but not one food place
is open

lucky for me my niece
coerced me
into buying (at a buck a throw)
not one but three Girl Scout chocolate bars and I clean my nails
and pass out 20 minutes into Bachelor Party
on the motel cable
and stay passed
till 2:30
at which point

SOUNDS of conspicuous check-in, of female orgasm clear through the walls and, still before 3, of conspicuous checking out

— a fuck motel!
granddaughter or daughter of hambone artist's one-time gal
"does it" with local clergyman!

probably not a whore motel,
tho:
her orgasm(s)
seemed quite sincere

Richard Meltzer will read from his recently reissued book, The Aesthetics of Rock, at George Sand Books, 9011 Melrose Ave., Sun., May 3, at 4:30 p.m.
